

Nehrwrodrbote (Nehrw - pronounced "nay-wah") Reuel is a highly sought after consultant and facilitator of what he describes as "much needed empathetic and compassionate dialogue with the goal of being more effective in how we work with and across our differences." His work focuses on building leadership skills by tapping into the diverse talents of individuals and their work-teams. His work on authentic community building has led to national recognition of some of the programs and students he worked with as Training Coordinator of the University of Minnesota's Diversity Institute. His work garnered national coverage with a front-page feature story in USA Today. In over 12 years at the Diversity Institute, Nehrw used a wide range of programs and services to enhance and promote the climate for diversity both on and off campus. Since that time, he has worked with a variety of organizations providing intercultural assessment and development, strategic planning, executive coaching, and leadership training.

Nehrw has tremendous ability to effectively use experiential learning to generate authentic dialogue and self-reflection. The people he's impacted with his work numbers well into the thousands.

Nehrw's education includes an undergraduate degree in Mathematics along with numerous certifications and advanced coursework in the areas of business administration, educational policy, conflict mediation, program design, adult learning, leadership development and team-building. Nehrw is also a chapter degree member of the National FFA organization.

Nehrw was a resident trainer with the Blandin Foundation of Grand Rapids Minnesota where he designed and implemented leadership programs for rural community leaders. Nehrw is both a Qualified Administrator (QA) and Qualifying Seminar Instructor of the Intercultural Development Inventory (IDI) – the premier intercultural development assessment tool used all over the world. Nehrw often serves as Lead Consultant where he oversees the development and delivery of a wide range of learning initiatives designed to better equip staff and volunteers to more effectively navigate the changing demographics and needs of their stakeholders. Nehrw's client list also includes AARP, Gates Foundation, HKS, Best Buy, Honeywell, Lockheed-Martin, and the City of Dubuque. Social service and nonprofits of all sizes such as Big Brothers Big Sisters of America, Alexandra House and YouthLink and the McKnight Foundation. Macalester College, Southwest Minnesota State University, University of Michigan, University of Illinois, and many many other educational institutions all over the country have made use of his expertise.

Nehrw was born in Washington D.C., raised on Chicago's South Side Roseland neighborhood and currently resides in Gilbert, AZ. Nehrw has been an independent consultant since 2003 and co-authored "The PLOOYA (Pie-OO-YA) Principles" which he jokingly describes as the 21st century's ultimate "anti-self-help book".
